Working With a Resource Designer: Let’s Collaborate!

Renovating? Downsizing? Trying to live a more edited life?

Remodeling or refinishing your existing home? Are you a downsizer in need of a more flexible home that can adapt to your changing needs? Or maybe you are an aspirant minimalist looking to live a more edited life. Whatever your reason for embracing the multifunctional lifestyle—put simply, you’re ready to work with a Resource designer.

Every Resource Furniture showroom is fully staffed with a team of experienced designers, equipped with the tools, skills and knowledge to help you realize the true potential of your space, no matter its size. From your initial showroom visit to installation day, your designer’s goal is to ensure your complete satisfaction through every stage of the process, ultimately arriving at a solution that’s uniquely suited for your home and way of life.

If you’ve never worked with a designer before, you may be wondering what to expect from your visit, what questions to ask, or what materials to bring. Here are a few things to keep in mind:

Assess
Whatever your goals, determining precisely what you need your furniture to accomplish before your initial visit will not only help your designer match you with the right selection of products, but will also allow you to develop a roadmap as you move forward with your home redesign.

Your Resource designer can help you optimize even the toughest layouts, but the better you can communicate to your designer what you need and want from your space during these early consultative stages, the easier this process will be.

Measure
Prepare for your Resource Furniture showroom visit by taking measurements and photos of the existing room or rooms.

Communicate
Our job is to use our tools and expertise to help you realize the home of your dreams! Look for sources of inspiration and share these with your designer, as this will help you narrow down your product selection and fabric/finish search later on. Our products are highly customizable and made-to-order so your designer can use your inspiration to identify a look that fits your unique design aesthetic.

After your initial appointment, your Resource Furniture designer can usually provide an in-home consultation to help perfect the final design. Remember, we are here every step of the way to ensure you receive the absolute best in quality and function from your living environment!

Enjoy your new space and your new lifestyle!

How to Carve Out Extra Space in a Small Apartment

#1: Keep What You Love and Use, Shed the Rest
With less stuff to store, the easier it is to carve out space for what matters in your small apartment. The first step to achieving an organized, well-curated home is to assess your possessions. Determine which items you use regularly, and which can be recycled or donated. This is often easier said than done; we may have sentimental attachments to things, or we convince ourselves that we’ll find a use for them in the future. If you find yourself struggling to let go, a good rule of thumb is: if you haven’t used an item in over a year, it’s generally safe to say it won’t be missed.

Remember that the point of decluttering is to fill your space with things that add joy to your life and remove the things that don’t. Upon analysis, many of us realize that we only use a small portion of the stuff we have in our homes.

#2: Think of Your Apartment as a City
Now that you’ve pared down your possessions, you might still be faced with the dilemma of finding a place for all the essentials. For inspiration, let’s think about cities. More specifically, let’s think about how cities fit more people, homes, and businesses into a limited footprint: by building up, not out.

To that end, some of the best—and least utilized—storage spaces in our small apartments are actually vertical spaces. Rather than crowding your small apartment with several low dressers or storage cabinets, invest in a few tall wardrobes, closets, or shelving systems. Effectively using vertical space makes your apartment more like an ultra-efficient city than a sprawling suburb.

#3: Go Multifunctional
In larger homes, you can afford to have items that serve a single purpose: a couch is just a couch, a dining room is just for dining. But in a small apartment, there’s a huge benefit in finding multiple uses for any one room or piece of furniture. Outfitting your apartment with multi-purpose and storage furniture allows you to enjoy many of the comforts typically reserved for larger homes without losing any precious square footage.

Multi-functional wall beds, for instance, allow a single room to be used 24 hours a day. Where a traditional, static bed takes up a considerable amount of floor space during daylight hours when it’s not being used, a wall bed with an integrated desk allows your bedroom to perform double-duty as a fully functioning home office. And thanks to their modular design, every one of our wall beds can seamlessly incorporate any cabinetry, closets or shelving configuration to meet your particular storage needs.

Whatever the room, whatever your budget, incorporating these three ideas will go a long way to making your small apartment feel and perform like one twice the size.

Small-space dwellers need storage systems tough enough to withstand constant and rigorous use, but they also need to be attractive — after all, when you are living 700 square feet or less, there’s no room for flimsy shelves or unsightly plastic containers.

Enter the world of modular storage. These design-your-own systems allow you to mix and match various storage elements — bookshelves, drawers, cubbies, closets, and more — to create a custom configuration that suits your unique space needs. Unlike traditional built-ins, modular storage units can be disassembled and reassembled as needed to accompany you through moves, making them ideal for renters.

Modular storage systems from Resource Furniture can be custom-configured to store virtually anything; but they are also beautiful design elements in and of themselves.

One stunning example comes from the home of our Upper Manhattan client who needed to squeeze more space and functionality out of her living room. She needed a catchall spot to hide everyday clutter, but also wanted a more elegant solution for mounting her TV and stowing away wires, cable boxes, and other electronics.

In addition, her new storage system needed to accommodate a Stainless-Steel Widescreen indoor fireplace from Hearth Cabinet, a Brooklyn-based manufacturer of high-end ventless fireplaces.

Resource Furniture combined various pieces from our collection of modular shelving, cabinets, and drawers with custom cut-outs to create an all-in-one storage system, entertainment center, and compact home office for our client. Finished in a gentle taupe matte lacquer with walnut shelves, the result is not only hyper-functional but also serves as the architectural centerpiece of the home.

The Home Office modular fold-out desk offers our client a generous work surface as well as an interior shelf and storage in its base cabinets for hiding away paperwork and office supplies. The unit’s upper shelving features ample space for exhibiting decorative items; a few sliding doors, shown here in white mirrored glass, conceal anything that does not need to be on display: books, games, glassware, and more.

The fireplace is finished with a blue-gray Caesarstone top, also supplied by Hearth Cabinet, to achieve a seamless, built-in look. (Resource worked directly with Hearth to ensure that the system would lay perfectly flush against the fireplace.) The TV is mounted directly above the fireplace, perfectly situated for cozy movie nights. A cut-out placed to the right of the fireplace provides a convenient nook for stowing the cable box and modem; below, two drawers keep remote controls and other miscellaneous AV equipment neatly out of sight.

Creating an Organized Multi-Use Room

No matter where we live — whether in a large suburban home or a studio apartment — we all invariably need more space. Luckily, you don’t have to upsize to get the added utility you need; with smart space-planning and a little creativity, you can pack a ton of function into the tiniest of spaces.

There’s Storage Hiding in Every Corner
There is an incredible amount of space hiding in your home — you just need to know where to look for it. Corners are an often-overlooked and under-utilized storage spot. The addition of a simple L-shaped corner desk, corner shelving unit, or corner closet can instantly multiply a room’s storage capacity, freeing up your floor space for other uses.

But don’t stop at desks or shelves — the uses for corners are endless. Use a banquette to create a corner dining nook; make a cozy reading corner in your guest room or home office; or use a corner to store kid’s toys.

Clear the Clutter
Multi-functional rooms need to store a whole lot more than your average, single-purpose space. Keep clutter at bay with creative storage. Resource offers storage solutions to suit nearly any space need — everything from walk-in closets to shallow cabinets, shelving systems and wall hooks. You can easily pair a full-height shelving or cabinetry system with a space-saving wall bed to create the appearance of a seamless, wall-to-wall built-in.

Whatever storage options you choose, the key takeaway here is that everything in your multi-functional home needs its own designated storage spot. When every item has its home, it’s much easier to keep your space clean and find what you need in a pinch.

Consider Your Real Space Needs
When it comes to multi-functional rooms, it’s not about splitting your space in half down the middle — it’s about allocating your space according to how you’ll actually use it. If you only use your formal dining room on special occasions and holidays, why should all that square-footage go to waste the remainder of the year? If you only host overnight visitors every once in a while, why fill an entire spare room with a stationary guest bed that rarely ever sleeps guests?

With transforming or fold-away furniture, you don’t have to choose between a guest room or an office, a dining room or a den — so design your multi-functional space in a way that prioritizes the activities for which you’ll use them the most.

Our commitment to superior quality products
The adage “you get what you pay for” always holds true. Buying the cheapest model or brand of a particular item doesn’t always end up being cheaper in the long run. Our Italian-made wall beds, in particular, are highly technical and complex pieces of furniture, built to last, and hand-crafted in the same family-owned factory since 1962.

Not only do we offer the only lifetime warranty in the industry, but our furniture is modular — so if an individual element is damaged, that one element can be replaced rather than discarding the entire unit and adding to already overburdened landfills.

Our commitment to environmental sustainability:
All of our Clei wall beds and storage systems are built under extremely stringent manufacturing standards that consider the welfare of our furniture craftsmen, end users, and the environment:

- Our wall beds and storage systems are manufactured using at least 90% recycled composite wood materials.
- New chipboard panels are made of renewable, controlled virgin wood rated E1 or better, indicating the highest quality of raw materials and guaranteeing the absence of harmful chemicals like formaldehyde.
- Our paints and lacquers are VOC-free, water-based, and completely non-toxic.
- To protect air quality and prevent off-gassing, Clei recaptures and recycles sawdust and gas by-products released during its manufacturing process through advanced techniques such as laser edge-binding and sealed routing.
- And all Resource Furniture products comply with CARB2/TSCA Title VI, the formaldehyde emissions standards set forth by the EPA.

Our commitment to human rights:
When workers are treated with respect and practice their craft in safe and healthy working environments, it is also reflected in the end product.

Every company in our global supply chain — from our manufacturers to our installers — treats its employees fairly and ensures their health and safety in the workplace. Our products and product components are manufactured only in countries that conform to the International Bill of Human Rights on issues such as equal pay for equal work, equal protection under the law, freedom of association, the right to own property, and non-discrimination.

In other words, the people building, finishing, shipping, and installing Resource Furniture are treated with respect and are paid a living wage. That may not be important to the bargain shopper who is willing to settle for a knock-off, but we believe our customers care not only about the quality of the product but about the quality of life of the people making the products.

Our commitment to you:
Every person at Resource Furniture is deeply and fundamentally committed to the well-being and happiness of our employees, our valued customers, and the betterment of our communities and our earth. We remain uniquely focused on these commitments every day.
