Working With a Resource Designer: Let’s Collaborate!

Remodeling? Downsizing? Trying to live a more edited life?

If you’ve never worked with a designer before, you may be wondering what to expect from your visit, what questions to ask, or what materials to bring. Here are a few things to keep in mind:

Assess
Whatever your goals, determining precisely what you need your furniture to accomplish before your initial visit will not only help your designer match you with the right selection of products, but will also allow you to develop a roadmap as you move forward with your home redesign.

Your Resource designer can help you optimize even the toughest layouts, but the better you can communicate to your designer what you need and want from your space during these early consultative stages, the easier this process will be.

Measure
Prepare for your Resource Furniture showroom visit by taking measurements and photos of the existing room or rooms.

Communicate
Our job is to use our tools and expertise to help you realize the home of your dreams! Look for sources of inspiration and share these with your designer, as this will help you narrow down your product selection and fabric/finish search later on. Our products are highly customizable and made-to-order so your designer can use your inspiration to identify a look that fits your unique design aesthetic.

Every Resource Furniture showroom is fully staffed with a team of experienced designers, equipped with the tools, skills and knowledge to help you realize the true potential of your space, no matter its size. From your initial showroom visit to installation day, your designer’s goal is to ensure your complete satisfaction through every stage of the process, ultimately arriving at a solution that’s uniquely suited for your home and way of life.

After your initial appointment, your Resource Furniture designer can usually provide an in-home consultation to help perfect the final design. Remember, we are here every step of the way to ensure you receive the absolute best in quality and function from your living environment!

Enjoy your new space and your new lifestyle!

EXPERT ADVICE

TIPS:
• For immediate needs, we offer a wide array of Quick Ship items ready for delivery in North America, usually within three weeks.
• Appointments are not required, but highly encouraged as this allows us to tailor your showroom tour around your particular interests and make the most of your valuable time.
• For architects, designers, and other tradespeople, we can provide CAD blocks and SketchUp files to help you streamline your project.

Ready for your visit? Find a showroom nearest you, then call or make an appointment to see how multifunctional furniture systems can completely transform the way you live.
“We didn’t just buy a wall bed – we bought the space it gave us.”

5 Tips for Decluttering Your Home

Inundated with stuff but lacking storage — or have you just caught the KonMari tidying bug? Either way, now’s the time to cut through the clutter and tackle your mess.

1. Throw it all out (in the open)
Counterintuitive as it may seem, you’ll need to get messy before you can be clutter-free. The first step to tidying up is assessing what and how much you own, and determining which items are regularly put to use. When all your things are piled up in front of you, not only is it easier to decide what needs to stay and what ought to go, but you also get a true sense of just how much stuff you truly have (and for most of us, it’s a lot).

2. Purge, purge, purge
Remove anything from the pile you no longer use and donate or recycle it. If you find yourself struggling to let go, a good rule of thumb is: if you haven’t used an item in over a year, it’s generally safe to say it won’t be missed.

This holds true for bigger items and furniture, too — consider whether these objects hold real value; you may just find that clearing them out opens entire rooms worth of space.

3. Everything should have a home
When everything you own has a home, finding things becomes much easier — which means you’re less likely to re-purchase objects you already own.

4. Consider your storage options
For those of us with limited square footage, investing in multi-purpose or storage furniture is a great way to maximize space while keeping everyday items out of sight.

5. It’s OK to work in small increments
Airing out all your possessions at once can quickly become overwhelming, so tackle one zone at a time. It could be one room, one cupboard, even one surface. Then, expand this de-cluttering zone at your own pace until it encompasses your entire house.

Bonus Tip: Recruit a Professional
Sometimes, decluttering can be too great a task to tackle on one’s own — especially when experiencing a major life change like moving to a new city, downsizing, or preparing for a big renovation. Professional organizers are great resources for those of us who just don’t know what to keep and what to toss.

If you’re looking to further maximize your available space, the designers at Resource are experts in space-planning. Our design team works one-on-one with clients to help them determine what pieces best suit their storage needs, creating floor plans and 3D renderings that show you how clutter-free and functional your home can look and feel.

Queens Wall Bed/Tango Sofa
Sustainable practices, quality products, a brighter future

Together with Clei, the manufacturer of our premium wall beds, we strive always to consider the planet and the people within our global supply chain just as much as the end consumer – because inevitably, we all benefit equally from sustainable and ethical manufacturing practices.

North American homes, offices and other buildings are responsible for more than one third of the continent’s greenhouse gas pollution output. Living in smaller – and most importantly - more efficient spaces while also constructing smaller and more energy efficient buildings is the cheapest and most economical way to make a dent in greenhouse gas emissions.

The products we sell make living in a smaller footprint not only comfortable, but luxurious and desirable.

When designing their products, Clei carefully sources materials to ensure every component has a minimal negative environmental impact.

Clei uses only CARB Phase II and TSCA Title VI compliant materials in all their products, which certifies that the formaldehyde content is limited to the amount naturally occurring in wood.

Reducing our collective carbon footprint extends far beyond the environmental impact of individual products. While the ingenious design of our products can reduce the need for excessive resource consumption, Resource and Clei are major thought leaders in the movement toward housing innovation, embracing progressive housing alternatives and sustainable living practices.

Poor quality products that fail within a short period of time and require replacement only add to our overtaxed landfills. Resource sells only the highest-quality products that are built to last.

Clei product components are made using ultra-high-tech manufacturing systems, including sealed routing and edgebinding with sawdust recapture and gas by product capture and recycling.

Resource offers a lifetime warranty on Clei mechanisms for residential use and a 7-year warranty for commercial use.

Clei wall beds use only water-based lacquer finishes, which dramatically reduce the release of VOCs (volatile organic compounds) into the environment, compared to the use of solvent-based lacquers. Water-based lacquers are odorless, non-flammable, and have very low toxicity levels.

Integrated LED lighting is available for almost all of our wall beds. LED lighting provides an almost 80% energy savings compared to incandescent bulbs, and 70% energy savings compared to halogen bulbs.

Make it Do Double Duty

You don’t need a large, single family home with a designated guest bedroom to be an excellent host — with a little creativity, homes of virtually any size can accommodate guests (Graham Hill even managed to fit a guest bed in his 200-square-foot Soho apartment). Your home office, media room, or finished basement or attic can become a perfect guest room with the use of transforming and multi-functional furniture, like storage beds, wall beds, or day beds. The Flex modular sofa, for instance, features movable backrests and reconfigurable sofa islands, so it can be used as a sofa, day bed, or chaise lounge.

Wall Beds: The OG of Transforming Furniture

With lots of additional features like integrated sofas, desks, and dining tables, Resource Furniture wall beds provides the functionality of an extra room. The Circe Sofa, for example, features integrated seven-foot sofa seating when closed, opening to reveal a queen-sized bed for guests. Similarly, the Adam Tavolo features a full-length, integrated writing desk during the day, and a queen bed at night, allowing your guest room to seamlessly transition to a home office in seconds.

Details, Large and Small

Because you aren’t resting there every night, it’s easy to overlook important details and small, finishing touches that make for an exceptionally comfortable guest bedroom — like a premium mattress and high-quality bedding. Invest in a quality, medium-firm mattress, with lots of additional features like integrated sofas, desks, and dining tables, Resource Furniture wall beds provides the functionality of an extra room. The Circe Sofa, for example, features integrated seven-foot sofa seating when closed, opening to reveal a queen-sized bed for guests. Similarly, the Adam Tavolo features a full-length, integrated writing desk during the day, and a queen bed at night, allowing your guest room to seamlessly transition to a home office in seconds.

Adding a variety of throw pillows, quilts and throw blankets will go a long way towards upping the comfort factor; they also allows guests to find their perfect sleeping temperatures — not to mention, they make for great décor.

Bedding is especially important if you’re furnishing your guest space for vacation rental income. High thread count sheets, attractive pillowcases, and a quality down comforter will give your guest room a hotel-like quality that sets your space apart – and keeps your guests coming back.

As a Broadway actor and singer, Adam Kantor is used to sharing small spaces. When he found his 350-square-foot co-op apartment near the East River in New York City’s Midtown, he felt right at home. “My studio is not that much larger than my Fiddler on the Roof dressing room,” says Kantor, referring to his recent role as Motel Kamzoil in the Tony Award-winning classic. “It’s great for somebody like me who lives a gypsy life.” Kantor, who went straight from Northwestern University to starring in the Broadway musical Rent, not only performs, but also teaches and produces, leading him to travel often.

“It’s a lot more elegant and opens up the space.” Inspired to devise his own creative solutions, Kantor disguises his television with a mirror, creating the illusion of a larger room.

Originally from Great Neck, Long Island, Kantor would take the train into Manhattan for theater classes and dreamt of the day he’d finally be a resident. After purchasing his compact apartment, in true New York fashion, Kantor needed to figure out how to maximize the available square footage. That’s when he turned to Resource Furniture. “I did some research, and it seemed like they were leading the way in the small space movement,” says Kantor. “I went to their flagship store and really geeked out over their modular pieces.”

The centerpiece of his pad is the Swing, a queen-size wall bed with a nine-foot sofa and sliding chaise. Boasting additional storage under the sofa, it’s a space-saving innovation that boosts the flexibility of the apartment. Kantor loves it so much that he’s considering taking the Swing with him even if he moves into a larger residence. “Why do we need a bed that sits unused for so much of the day?” he reasons.

Kantor also chose the Goliath, a table that transforms from a 17-inch deep console to a 110-inch dining table thanks to an aluminum telescoping mechanism. This table gives him the option of easily and stylishly entertaining a group of friends. “When it’s just a console against the wall,” he explains, “there’s a perfect yoga studio in my living room. As a performer, it’s important to have the space to move and practice.”

“It’s been almost spiritually cleansing to force myself to declutter.” says Kantor. And thanks to his versatile furniture from Resource, “Living small can be so much more manageable and cost-effective.”

Upgrade Your Work Space

Enhance and Embrace

As anyone who has had the displeasure of working in a dark and drab cubicle will tell you, our work environment has a significant impact on our mood and productivity. Clean, welcoming work spaces with personalized touches help keep our minds uncluttered and our motivation high. Here we share our tips for designing a workspace that inspires creativity and contentment—and, most importantly, helps you get your work done.

Light the Way
Know that dispiriting feeling that sinks in after working for hours under harsh, fluorescent lights? Lighting is a critical design element, and it’s especially important in a place where you’ll presumably spend most of your daylight hours. For years, research has shown that exposure to natural light during daylight hours has a powerful impact on workplace productivity and overall quality of life. If you’re a telecommuter, or if you have a say in where your office desk is located, consider designing your workspace around a source of natural light. You may find that your mood, mental clarity, and even your sleep patterns improve significantly.

For those of us who can’t access daylight there are many ways to manipulate artificial light to our benefit. Choose a good desk lamp with adequate light to reduce eye strain. To give the illusion of daylight, use LED bulbs with color temperatures of 5000k or higher. These emit white to bluish-white colored light, similar to the color of natural sunlight. Some modern desks feature built-in LED lighting to reduce desk clutter, including our Triplo Freestanding Desk which offers built-in back-lit shelves for a soft and natural glow.

Color Me Happy
While neutral palettes can bring a clean, minimalist aesthetic to the workplace, it’s good to break the monotony with a dash of color in your personal work space, whether in an office or at home. Personalize your deskscape with colorfully framed photos, desk accessories, calendars or vibrant desk screens. If you’re crunched for space, you can opt for functional items like colorful stationary in place of tchotchkes—either way, small pops of color will keep you feeling inspired and give your eyes a break from the drudgery of white and greige.

Living Small with Kids? Don’t Upsize, Adapt.

Parents Alison and Trevor know a thing or two about small-space cohabitation

Alison and Trevor Mazurek were perfectly happy in their 600 square foot, one-bedroom, one-bathroom Vancouver apartment. Small as it was, it had gorgeous lofted ceilings, an outdoor patio, tons of natural light, and an unbeatable location right in the heart of the city, near Vancouver’s trendy restaurants and boutiques. But as the family grew, they were faced with a choice all too familiar to many young couples — would they upsize to accommodate their new additions, or stay and learn to cohabit in 600 square feet?

When their first baby, Theo, arrived on the scene, Alison and Trevor were certain that their days in the tiny apartment with the big, beautiful windows and high ceilings were numbered. Without space for a proper nursery, Theo slept in a mini crib in the living room for the first few months of life. But the couple quickly grew tired of tiptoeing around the baby in the dark — they decided they needed their home back, even if it was only a temporary living arrangement. They gave Theo the lone bedroom, and installed a Penelope 2 queen-size wall bed from Resource Furniture in an area off the kitchen, which became their bedroom. The dining table was moved to the kitchen, where it would be put to better use.

“Living small has informed my role as a parent in quite a few ways, like valuing time over things, getting outside and using our city as our backyard” – Alison

To the couple’s surprise, what started as a temporary solution to their space problem became a lasting investment in both their home’s functionality and in their overall quality of life. By strategically incorporating transforming furniture, Alison and Trevor found that their family could not only manage in a small apartment, but actually thrive in it. Their queen wall bed folded up during the day, allowing room for a spacious sectional where the couple could stay up late, listen to music, and entertain friends. Meanwhile, baby Theo had his own dedicated space to sleep, play and grow.

Then came baby number 2 — daughter Mae — and once again, Alison and Trevor heard the familiar refrain: “But surely you’ll need to move, now!” Just like before, the family was fairly sure that a move would eventually be in order; but the now-family of four was willing to stick it out and give it a try. Alison and Trevor watched as their babies grew and hit milestone after milestone, unimpeded by space, and they realized that upsizing was not, in fact, an inevitability. Rather than leave their beloved apartment, they decided to install a second wall bed system in the kids’ shared bedroom — this time, a Kali Duo bunk wall bed. Theo and Mae can fold away their bunk beds in the daytime, and use the room as their playroom.
